Professional Brooklyn hitman Jimmy Conlon is more commonly known as THE GRAVEDIGGER. Jimmy was a mob hit-man, who was best friends with his boss Sean Maguire. But when Jimmy's son, Michael, is marked for death by the mob, Jimmy must go up against Sean to protect Michael at all costs. Together, he and Michael must avoid corrupt cops, contract killers and the mob to survive the night. Jimmy Conlon, the ageing Irish-American mob enforcer for the crime kingpin, Shawn Maguire, is now reduced to a penniless and remorseful alcoholic whose estranged son, Mike, wants nothing to do with him. However, when Danny becomes the target of the ruthless boss' henchmen, Jimmy, the once infamous "Gravedigger", will be forced back into action to protect his son and his family. Under those circumstances, with every mobster and every cop in the city after both father and son, inevitably, it is going to be one endless, and above all, blood-drenched night. What chances do Jimmy and Mike have to make it out alive? Pretty entertaining action flick with a fast paced narration. A typical Liam Neeson's movie. Take a gun and go hunt down the bad guys or protect loved ones from them kind of movie. Under his league, like always he was awesome. This has been a already heard story, like a trivia say. Yes, it was similar to 'Road to Perdition', but happens for a different reason and with the different cast. Still the movie was better that I expected.

I went speechless when I saw Neeson was begging in the opening scene. Because that's not his style, action heroes like him, Jason Statham, Bruce Willis et cetera, they don't fit in those roles. But what came just a few minutes later was like switching to second, third, fourth and fifth gear in a quick session. You know you can't judge a book by its cover, same applies for this as well. The film was good, I mean better than average, better than ratings and reviews across the web.

It was kind of unofficial 'A Man with a Gun' trilogy (I made it up) after 'Unknown' and 'Non-stop'. Because if you check it out all these three film's posters, Neeson will be seen with a gun in the similar fashion. Hope this director and actor comes together to do more movies in the future, since it is a rocking combo. Well, they all might not be the masterpieces, but enjoyable at the time of the watch. Especially it will not disappoint Neeson's fans.

7/10 Run All Night is a good movie with a reasonably well developed plot and a terrific cast. It is an enjoyable thriller that is constantly moving, there is never really a dull moment. It's always pushing forward, keeping you at the edge of your seat, mostly due to effective performances from Liam Neeson and Ed Harris.

However, the fact that it is constantly moving is also a flaw in a way, as it never really takes time to develop the characters. We learn significantly little about Jimmy, despite the fact he is the protagonist, there is not much scope given to the character, making it difficult to connect with him and the journey he is going on because of that.

As well as that, it is quite a typical affair, there really is nothing new or groundbreaking in this film. It is all expected, every twist and turn that occurs throughout has happened in several other films prior and in a more effective manner.

You can get a clear sense of a movie that was solely made for money, one that never tries to do anything even remotely different, that's exactly what this was. It is certainly a fun watch, but if you are looking for something new, Run All Night is not for you, worth the watch if you are looking for a good thriller, just do not go out of your way to see it.

A hit man is hired by a mob boss to kill his own son.

Best Performance: Ed Harris A film that double-underlines the fact that Collet-Serra knows exactly what to do with Neeson's on-screen persona in what is ultimately their most satisfying film yet.
